IN OTHER NEWS

20. USA Today’s headline was “UNDISPUTED CHUMP.” The London Sun’s was “SUCKER MUNCH.” What were they talking about?

21. The Philadelphia Daily News’ headline was “IT’S A RAP.” The New York Post’s was “CAPUT!” What were they talking about?

22. What newspaper published the headline “BEER BARON BEATS BANNER”?

23. What, according to the Motley Fool, is the headline which is more classic than any other?

24. Inverness Caley Thistle beat heavily favored Celtic, 3-1, in the 2000 Scottish Cup final. What brilliantly goofy headline did the Scottish Sun print on February 9, 2000?

25. The earliest newspaper-like format was a one-page daily sheet posted at various points around its city of origin. Who ordered this?

26. One-sheets and pamphlets published in late-1400s Germany were the first tabloid-style newspapers. (Sensationalized tormenting of public figures didn't begin with Winona, O.J., Martha, and Wacko Jacko, you know.) What person's atrocities were reported-- or invented, when necessary-- by these forerunners of today's press?

27. What was the first newspaper published in the Americas?

28. The term "yellow journalism" comes from a circulation war between New York tabloids, each publishing competing versions of the same comic strip character-- which?

29. The top story in the July 29, 1926 edition of the New York Times was the arrest of Frances Hall for the murder of her husband, a reverend. The 2nd story was a boycott by Mexico City women protesting state regulations. According to The Paper Of Record, what was the third-most important thing to occur on July 28, 1926?

30. What was the lengthiest article published by the Washington Post in 1997?
COLUMNS

In order to create the illusion that their news coverage ISN'T skewed and massaged into a form pleasing to their corporate masters, newspapers like to run opinion columns. This cleverly implies that the rest of the paper is above special interests. Well, we can be clever ducks, too. However, we don't need to waste your time with political drivel (gee, which side of free trade shall the Wall Street Journal come down on today?), inane pop culture simpitudes (yeah, nice Pulitzer, Dowd; can't wait for your Bush = Matrix column the week after the movie opens), or heart-tugging appeals to bourgeois emotionalism (Please, God, We've Seen "Please, God, I'm Only 17" 17 Times Before-- DIE Already!). We only care about one thing: those fabulous headshots! Please identify the columnist from their grainy, unpleasant mug.
COLUMNISTS

Of course, all observers of the American scene must tip their caps to the undisputed master of the opinion column. Ed Anger is pig-bitin', beer-spittin', wife-kickin' mad from the first moment he sits down at the typewriter. But exactly HOW mad is he?

He's madder than Ted Williams _______________.

He's madder than a grease monkey _______________.

He's madder than a brain surgeon _______________.

He's madder than a window washer _______________.

He's madder than a hungry lion _______________.

He's madder than Monica Lewinsky _______________.

He's madder than a swami _______________.

He's madder than a Nazi prison camp commandant _______________.

He's madder than a rooster _______________.

He's madder than an Italian _______________.

In the space remaining, please write a paragraph or two in the style of Dave Barry. Your topic: the dating scene at Williams College.
POLITICAL CARTOONS

This newspaper is an unbiased conduit of pure information. We dance to the tune of no political faction, be it conservative or liberal. However, we still feel an obligation to present the viewpoints of America’s foremost political cartoonists. To avoid offending anyone, however, we choose to publish 19 of them all at once. Each reader will surely find somebody here to affirm their existing worldview, without the smallest whiff of intellectual challenge to annoy them. Your only challenge is to name the 19 artists.
Normally, the ability to write English is a skill that will help a person to finish a crossword. But not tonight. This puzzle is guaranteed to contain a misspelling, intentional or otherwise, in every answer. Also, all clues come from the world of music. Please give us the right wrong solution.

COMICS

What a horrible bungle! For no apparent reason, all of the comic strips got mixed up at the printers. Now there’s only one panel from each strip! And even worse, the panels don’t even have any of the characters in them! The editor has given up hope. It’s up to YOU to identify each comic strip title, based solely on the background settings that remain.
The following baseball box scores are all unique in some way. Tell us the significance of each--a play, a result, a first, a mistake, a moment. Taking Roger Clemens as an example, we might have chosen the box scores where he struck out 2 batters (twice), or the game where he drilled Mike Piazza in the skull. The very first All-Star Game, or the very first appearance of the San Diego Chicken. You may now throw out the first guess.
